CCMAS book series being launched as well as the capacity building programme for the implementation of the CCMAS for University staff were major steps towards achieving such goal.

Mallam Adamu, who congratulated the leadership of the NUC for taking the bold step to develop a fit-forpurpose and globally competitive curriculum for 17 disciplines in the Nigerian Universities System (NUS), with emphases on 21st Century employability skills and entrepreneurship, reminded the stakeholders that, the 70% of core courses in the curriculum had been provided by the Commission, while the universities had been given the opportunity to innovate, input their peculiarities and uniqueness into the

The Minister stressed that the implementation of the CCMAS required dedication, hard work and willingness to embrace change by everybody and noted that there was urgent need to invest in training academics with the necessary skills and knowledge to effectively implement the CCMAS.

He called on participants at the event to take advantage of the training programme to equip themselves with the needed skills and by so doing transfer the knowledge acquired to their various universities.

He assured the participants that the NUC had put up a very robust programme that promises to be comprehensive, interactive and geared to meet their needs as educators. He further highlighted that the programme would further equip university staff with details of the new curriculum as well as help them to embrace modern teaching methods. He, therefore, expressed the hope that the participants were ready to glean the new ways and prioritise their involvement in the training.

He explained that one other important reason why the stakeholders gathered was for the presentation of the book series meant to ensure the efficient delivery of the CCMAS which remained a reference document that contained innovative means of delivery of the 17 new disciplines, aimed at deepening their understanding in order to improve teaching, learning and produce graduate that could compete with their counterparts globally.

He also paid glowing tributes to the life and times of late Professor Idris Abdulkadir, a former Executive Secretary of NUC and Professor Nimi Briggs, a member of the NUC Strategic Advisory Committee (NUCSTRADVCOM) who, both, passed on weeks before the launch of the new curriculum and called for a minute silence in their remembrance. While explaining that they left at a time when their contributions to the education section was vielding much fruit, he prayed for the repose of their souls and for God to grant them eternal rest.

In his address, the Executive Secretary, NUC, Professor Abubakar Adamu Rasheed, mni, MFR, FNAL, congratulated the Minister of Education for his immense contributions to the

had also received FEC approval raising the number of private universities in the country from 111 to 148.

Professor Rasheed who described Mallam Adamu Adamu as one of the longest serving Ministers in the country since the return to democratic rule in 1999, stated that since assumption of duty in 2015, the Honourable Minister had midwifed the establishment of about 80 percent of the universities in Nigeria.

Dr. Noel Saliu Deputy Executive Secretary (Academics), NUC

While harping on the training programme for the university staff on CCMAS, the NUC Scribe charged the participants to ensure active participation as they were key drivers of the CCMAS especially in ensuring its full implementation.

He assured that the NUC would continue to do its best to ensure robust reforms as it concerned the CCMAS, stating that it was to be implemented fully from the 2023/2024 academic session beginning with the year one students.

Delivering the Keynote Address, the Secretary-General, Association of African Universities (AAU), Professor Olusola Oyewole described the new CCMAS as a revolution which had come to rebrand the university system in Africa. He stressed that the curriculum being used during Colonial era were designed to meet the man-power needs for recruitment by the Colonial Masters into public service.

He stated that this was no longer the focus of the 21st century students as the demands of the present-day labour market take into consideration the global development of a new hi-tech and revolutionary market that had given rise to new methods of doing business, hence the need for a new curriculum to train 21st century student who can compete globally.

"The revolution that is evolving, the present day knowledge is flexible and that means that students should be able to learn, relearn and unlearn, he said". He therefore called for the decolonization of the African curricula, a task he said the NUC has taken head on over the years from Minimum Requirements to Benchmark Minimum Academic

Professor Oyewole stated that the new CCMAS would among other things, change the system from being teacher-centred to being learner-centred as teachers would teach pre-identified learning outcomes, while flexible learning would be promoted; life-long learning would be encouraged; and learners would be able to acquire and demonstrate some essential employability skills. He said he was a reward and epitome of hard work devoid of tribe and religion, highlighting that it was unfortunate that he was not given a national Honor when people of questionable characters were given National Honours. He commended Professor Okebukola for naming the NUC Auditorium after him.

Another Former DES, Mallam Ibrahim Dan'Iya in his tribute eulogized the late sage as a very committed and dedicated person, noting that one of his greatest contributions was ensuring that NUC did not end as a Toothless Bulldog. He stated that Late Abdulkadir implemented the core mandate of the NUC.

He also extolled his virtues as a perfect gentle man and someone of good work ethics as well as one of the brightest stars in Veterinary Medicine in the country.

The son of the late ES, Yusuf Abdulkadir said NUC had done tremendously well in keeping in touch with the family despite the many years after the end of his service in the Commission and raised a question as to how many Parastatal had kept such faith with their CEO three Decades after leaving office like the NUC.

He thanked every staff of the NUC for the love and affection shown to the family.

He also extended his deep condolences to the family of Late Emeritus Professor Nimi Briggs.

Tributes were also poured to the life and time of Professor Emeritus Nimi Briggs, one time Vice-Chancellor of the University of Port-Harcourt (UNIPORT), who many described as a consummate administrator, a dependable ally and one of Nigeria's finest Professor of Medicine, who God had used to save several lines in the course of his medical practice in Nigeria.
